

Table of Contents

Abstract	iii
Executive summary	iv
1. Introduction and background to the study	1
2. Literature Review	5
2.1 Overview	5
2.1.1 Stakeholder engagement and social learning.....	5
2.1.2 Participation	6
2.1.3 Community voice	8
2.1.4 Communicating the need for interaction & participation	9
2.1.5 Shared dissatisfaction as a driver for participation.....	10
2.1.6 Sense of ownership as a benefit of participation	10
2.2 Volunteerism	10
2.2.1 What is volunteerism?	10
2.2.2 The next generation of volunteers.....	11
2.2.3 The cyclical nature of volunteerism	12
2.2.4 Core influences on volunteerism	13
2.2.5 Volunteerism in other countries	20
2.2.6 Volunteerism in Africa	21
2.2.7 Volunteerism in South Africa	22
2.3 Narrative- and complexity-based research methods	23
2.4 Implications for this study.....	25
3. Methodology	27
3.1 Pre-hypothesis approach to research	27
3.2 Narrative data gathering techniques	28
3.2.1 Interviews	28
3.2.2 Anecdote Circles	28
3.3 Archetype extraction workshops	29
3.4 Narrative Analysis.....	30
4. Findings	31
4.1 Key patterns	31
4.1.1 Appropriate knowledge and enablement	31
4.1.2 Agency	34
4.1.3 Issue salience and the cyclical nature of volunteerism	35
4.1.4 Leadership.....	37
4.2 Hartbeespoort Dam specific findings.....	38
4.2.1 Meeting fatigue	38
4.2.2 Salience of water-related issues	38
4.2.3 Property ownership	39
4.2.4 Agency & the “higher power”	39
4.2.5 Myths	40
4.2.6 Leadership.....	40
4.2.7 Follow-through	40
4.2.8 Communication	41
4.2.9 Volunteering identities.....	41
4.2.10 Passion	42
4.2.11 Spirituality	42
4.2.12 Networking	43
4.2.13 Positive Realism	43
4.2.14 Motivation	43
5. Necessary factors for the emergence of volunteerism	45
5.1 Recommendations for communities wanting to stimulate volunteerism and engagement.	45
6. Conclusion	50

7. Acknowledgements.....	50
8. References	51
Addendum A – Full List of Archetypes	55
Group 1: volunteers or people actively involved in water-related activities	55
Group 2: Uninvolved community	63
Group 3: Learners from the Ennis Thabong school	66